Manager's comment

As at 30 June 2017, VNI's NAV closed at USD12.6m or USD0.036 per share*, down 1.4% compared to last month. VNI's share price reduced to USD0.023 compared to last month. As a result, the Fund's share price to NAV discount widened to 36.2%.

* The NAV has been calculated using the net realisable value approach, which the Manager believes provides the best estimate of the amount of cash that will be returned to shareholders prior to the liquidation of the Company. This approach takes into account the Company's current cash holding, expected future receipts from divestments, and expected future payments for costs incurred up to and including the Company's liquidation. The actual amount of cash returned to shareholders will inevitably differ from this estimate, however the Manager does not expect any material variation from this estimate unless there is a delay in the liquidation of the Company or unforeseen liquidation costs and/or liabilities arise on warranties and indemnities given in relation to investments sold over the last 12 months.

Macroeconomic Update

Vietnam's GDP growth rate accelerated from 5.2% yoy in 1Q17 to 6.2% in 2Q16, leading to a GDP growth of 5.7% yoy for 1H17. The acceleration in GDP growth was driven by improvements in both manufacturing and consumption growth. In Q1, manufacturing growth was impeded by a reported 38% fall in Samsung's production due to issues with the company's Galaxy S7 phone, but the launch of the Samsung's new S8 smartphone helped lift Vietnam's manufacturing activity from 8.3% year-on-year (yoy) rate of growth in Q1 to an estimated 12% yoy pace in Q2 (manufacturing activity grew 10.5% yoy in 1H17).

Export growth accelerated from a 5.9% pace in 1H16 to 18.9% yoy growth in 1H17, which was Vietnam's fastest H1 export growth in the last five years, but imports rose 24.1% yoy, degrading Vietnam's trade balance from a circa 1.7%/GDP surplus in 1H16 to a 2.7%/GDP deficit in 1H17. However, the country's import growth was driven by a 37.8% increase in purchases of tools and machinery in the first half of the year – signaling that Vietnam's manufacturing production is likely to continue expanding in 2H17 and 2018.

The other notable improvement from the beginning of the year was an increase in Vietnam's reported real retail sales growth. Vietnam's General Statistics Office (GSO) reported a 6.2% yoy increase in real retail sales in 1Q17, and a 8.4% yoy increase in 1H17, implying an acceleration in real consumption growth in Q2 (the GSO does not report quarterly retail sales growth figures). However, the improvement in the reported real retail sales growth was partly attributable to a drop in the Consumer Price Index (CPI) inflation from 4.7% yoy at the end of 1Q17 to 2.5% at the end of 1H17.

Finally, despite the acceleration in Vietnam's growth from earlier this year, the government's GDP growth target of 6.7% for 2017 now seems challenging. Oil production fell by about 13% in H1, without which Vietnam's GDP would have grown at about a 7% pace in H1, but we do not expect this situation to improve in the second half of the year, so we expect GDP to grow by 6.3-6.5% this year. Achieving our forecast would necessitate an increase in Vietnam's GDP growth from 6.7% in 2H16 to above 7% in 2H17, but with the Vietnam's Purchasing Managers' Index (PMI) rebounding from a 14-month low of 51.6 in May to 52.5 in June, we are optimistic that our forecast can be reached.
